The Department of Fashion and Apparel Design at The Oxford College of Science proudly organized a vibrant fashion show at the quadrangle on the occasion of National Handloom Day. The event celebrated the rich heritage of Indian handlooms and showcased innovative student creations inspired by traditional textiles and weaves. Models walked the ramp in beautifully crafted ensembles that highlighted the diversity of regional handloom fabrics, blending tradition with contemporary fashion. The show aimed to promote awareness about sustainable fashion and the importance of preserving indigenous handloom crafts. It was a successful and inspiring celebration of India's cultural legacy through fashion.
